Educational innovation, active methodologies and new spaces for teaching and learning

Apertura is a scientific journal specialising in educational innovation in virtual environments that is published every six months by the University of Guadalajara, through the Virtual University System. It publishes original, unpublished and current research papers in Spanish, English and Portuguese, peer-reviewed double-blind.

The purpose of this journal is to promote scientific communication and academic debate in the field of virtual, online, distance and non-conventional education modalities involved with educational technology. It is responsible for disseminating research results on education, through scientific articles and essays that encourage debate on issues in the field of education in virtual learning environments.

As mentioned above, Apertura is published by the University of Guadalajara (Mexico) through the Virtual University System, and is sponsored by the Academic, Administrative and Technological departments of UDGVirtual, in conjunction with the National Council of Science and Technology (Conacyt) and the Coordination of Research, Postgraduate and Liaison of the University of Guadalajara. It is indexed in renowned databases such as Dialnet, Lantindex, Redalyc, among others.

This call aims to publish research articles and scientific essays that highlight the following topics:
